

COVID-19 Keeping you Informed

In recent weeks, COVID-19 has impacted the economy, the markets, and personal finances. I'd like to share with you some helpful articles that can help put some perspective on matters. Some of these pieces help to summarize the current government financial relief efforts and resources available during this time. Please feel free to reach out to me if you'd like to discuss further.

As of March 27, 2020

Topic	Overview
Don't let fear rule your mind in times of crisis	A conversation with Brad Simpson, Chief Wealth Strategist, TD Wealth about how to pull yourself away from your fears, get a broader perspective and make reasonable decisions. Click here to learn more.
Fed pledges to do whatever it takes. But will it be enough?	A conversation with Michael Craig, Head, Asset Allocation, TD Asset Management as the federal government brings out a barrage of policy moves to support credit and the economy. Click here to learn more.
Will massive U.S. stimulus stop rapid economic deterioration?	A conversation with James Orlando, Sr. Economist, TD Bank, about the potential impact and effectiveness of massive U.S. stimulus efforts, outlook for the loonie and the Canadian economy. Click here to learn more.
6 things that may ease your financial anxiety right now ... it's happened before	If you're concerned about the impact COVID-19 will have on your finances, you're not alone. Here are some things that could help put some perspective on matters. Click here to learn more.
Finding value as markets struggle for direction	A conversation with David Sykes, Head of Public Equities, TD Asset Management, about what needs to happen before markets find the bottom, and how to find companies that can emerge when the crisis subsides. Click here to learn more.
COVID-19 and your taxes: All of the changes so far	The federal government has made some changes to the 2020 tax season to give us time, and help with our cashflow during the COVID-19 pandemic. Here is what you need to know. Click here to learn more.